Mt Evelyn Station House re-opens

The refurbished Station House, comprising the Library, Community Link, Community Room, Exhibition Space and Café, was officially opened on Friday 28th August.

MP James Merlino filled in for the Hon. Richard Wynne, who was unavailable. Opening the new facility, James spoke of the changes that had occurred since the formation of the Mt Evelyn Township Improvement Committee (METIC) in 1998. He unveiled a plaque commemorating the opening.

Cr Tim Heenan agreed about changes for the better. When he came to live here 23 years ago, the question was 'why would you live in Mt Evelyn?' It has now become a desirable place to live, thanks largely to the voluntary work of the residents. Cr Heenan acknowledged the History Group for contributing the historical photos of the Station that have been combined into a collage on the wall.

Angela Savage from the Association of Neighbourhood Houses and Learning Centres (ANHLC) launched METIC's updated Township Plan. Angela, who admitted to suffering from 'Township Plan Envy', praised METIC's representational structure. Covering many areas of community life, it has 'something for just about everybody'.

'Suggestion postcard' with pictures of the Station House 'then and now'. The History Group provided the historical images.

Wine, snacks and conversation followed the launch. The additional space and flexibility of the Community Room won general approval. The relocation of the Community Link seems to have both pro and cons. Having the information sources located in one building makes sense. On the other hand, some people feel that the intimacy of the old Link has been lost.

Residents are invited to give their opinions of the new facility and suggest further uses for it on postcards provided for the purpose.

Lorraine Fairweather, who remembered the Station garden, told us a delightful detail we hadn't heard before. There was a garden bed with the name 'Mt Evelyn' spelt out in succulents.

This feature could perhaps be recreated, for example in front of the platform with the Bollard People.

'Closing the Gap' workshop

Garry Detez, Indigenous Development Officer with the Shire of Yarra Ranges, presented a workshop on Aboriginal history and current policy in the Shire. The 'Gap' of the title was the 17-year difference in life expectancy between Indigenous Australians and the general population.

Garry began with an acknowledgement of the Wurrundjeri people as the traditional owners of the land and of the Elders, past and present. This form of acknowledgement was devised in consultation with the Aboriginal community and its use is much appreciated by them.

Garry was introduced to Aboriginal culture by his ex-wife and her family, who were from the Monaro people of East Gippsland. At the same time he gained an insight into racism. It was only from the 1967 referendum that the Aboriginal population was counted as human. Previously they were covered by the Flora and Fauna Act.

We were asked about our own ethnic heritage. Most people had some sense of attachment to a place, which might be where they grew up, where they lived for the longest time, or where their ancestors originated.

The audience was then divided in two. Each group was asked to choose a tribal name, territory, language and totem, and identify elders, warriors, aunts, uncles and children. It was easy to see how a group displaced by European settlement would be both unwilling to leave their own territory and unable to move onto anyone else's.

Issues of traditional law and the Stolen Generations were also clarified.

Many of the problems of the Shire's present Aboriginal population can be traced back to the early days of settlement. Indigenous people from all over Victoria were sent to Coranderrk Reserve near Healesville. Breaking up the tribes made it difficult for them to practice their traditions. It also sowed the seeds of conflict between the groups that continues today.

Coranderrk residents farmed the land so successfully that it was taken from them by settlers wanting access to good land. In other words, they were punished for their success. In the 1880s, when Aboriginal people petitioned the authorities for land on which they could be self-sufficient, they were refused on the basis that the government would look after them. The culture of welfare dependency that is so often criticised was the direct result of 19th century government policies.

Garry said that the Rudd government's apology to the Stolen Generations had made a huge difference to Aboriginal people, but that the federal and state governments were not well placed to work at the grassroots level. That is the role of local government.

The Shire of Yarra Ranges apologised to Indigenous people in 1997 and released its Reconciliation Strategy in 2008. The Strategy includes the priorities of maintaining an Indigenous voice, cultural heritage, young people, health and wellbeing, and encouraging partnerships with the wider community to promote employment. The councillors, particularly Cr Tim Heenan, have been very supportive.

Garry presented us with a copy of the Shire's Reconciliation booklet and praised our booklet Aborigines in the Northern Dandenongs.

AGM and new committee

Our AGM, scheduled for 25th August, had to be postponed at the last moment due to the wild weather. The power was out at Morrison House and one of the old cypress trees fell across the roof.

Damage to the building was minor, but several vehicles were squashed very flat indeed. Nobody was hurt – almost miraculously, as one staff member was in her car at the time.

We finally held our AGM on Saturday 12th September, after Garry's talk. The new committee is as follows:

President Paula Herlihy
Vice President to be confirmed
Treasurer Kevin Phillips
Secretary Karen Phillips
Newsletter editor Karen Phillips

General Committee:

Bill Hardy, Nancy Low, Rosemary Baker, others as advised.

Changes to the Incorporation rules mean that the position of Public Officer has been abolished. Many thanks to Mary Golds for filling this role till now.

It was agreed not to proceed with affiliation with the Royal Historical Society at this time. We may reconsider it in the future. No vote was taken.

More on the 'Wattle Dress'

Thanks to Librarian Kathy Smalley for an article on the 'Wattle Dress' portrait of the Queen by Sir William Dargie.

As mentioned in an earlier newsletter, Dargie painted a back-up version of the famous portrait in case the first was lost in transit to Australia. Interestingly, he painted this second version by copying upside down from the first. Seeing the painting purely in colours and forms, he could make an exact copy without being tempted to 'improve' on the original. The 'spare' portrait is now in the National Museum of Australia.

I'd assumed vaguely that the Wattle gown was Australian made, but it was in fact a creation of English designer Norman Hartnell.

Who Do You Think You Are?

An episode of the television genealogy program 'Who Do You Think You Are?' featuring a segment with Paula Herlihy is due for broadcast on SBS on Sunday 1st November.

Harry Leith

Robyn Taylor writes re the name Leithen or Leith, mentioned in the last newsletter: 'With reference to the Newsletter (August), I grew up in Montrose and there was a Leith Road. It ran parallel to Sheffield Road North, where I lived.'

Not going anywhere: cars flattened by a huge cypress at Morrison House.

Harry Leith, whose name appears in the honour roll, may well have some connection with Leith Road. Whether he was the same person identified as a dispatch rider from the Army camp, we don't yet know.

From Kev's rain gauge

Rainfall for August 2009 in millilitres compared with Melbourne's August average:

Mt Evelyn	Melbourne	Melb. Av.
66.4	41.4	50.2

Kevin's figures are recorded at our place on Hereford Road. There seems to be considerable variation within Mt Evelyn, as Jean Edwards writes:

'We keep rainfall records too, and while I expected there would be quite a variation across Mt Evelyn, it is apparently more than I anticipated.

Ours was:

June, 78.75ml; July, 117.25ml.

This compares with Hereford Road:

June, 61ml; July, 75.4ml.

Jean and David's property is in McKillop, so this large difference occurs over a distance of about 2Km.

Memberships due

Thanks to all who have renewed their History Group memberships this year. Memberships fell due at the end of the financial year. A renewal form is attached on page 7 below.
